However, Letters from Iceland—itself a product of the authors ' Icelandophilia—portrays a host of others stricken with the same bug. In fact, Auden may well have coined the neologism, writing of a fellow traveller whom he characterized as " a Scotch girl, an English lecturer at one of our provincial universities, and a great Icelandophil. Because Auden authored the bulk of Letters from Iceland, it was appropriate that MacNeice should have the last lines of the book and that they should be addressed to Auden himself. The " Epilogue, " written in the tetrameter couplets grouped into quatrains that Auden would deploy just a few years later for the last section of " In Memory of W.B. Yeats, " summarizes in pithy lines the poets " " Iceland trip " and reviews the tumultuous events transpiring in their absence.

Auden returned to Iceland in 1965, and wrote a foreword to the 1966 edition of Letters from Iceland (by then MacNeice had passed away). In this foreword, Auden traces his lifetime relationship with Iceland: "In my childhood dreams Iceland was holy ground; when, at the age of twenty-nine, I saw it for the first time, the reality verified my dream; at fifty-seven it was holy ground still, with the most magical light of anywhere on earth."
